Involvement of hormones in olfactory imprinting and homing

The olfactory hypothesis for salmon homing to their natal stream was proposed in the 1950s 5,6, and the mechanisms of olfactory imprinting and homing in salmon have been intensively researched using behavioural, electrophysiological, biochemical, and neurobiological methods 7,8,9.

Olfactory Imprinting in Salmon New Models and Approaches

Olfactory imprinting is a specialized form of unconditioned learning in which olfactory information is acquired and then used in some specific behavioral context later in life. A key characteristics of an imprinted memory is that it is formed during a sensitive period of development.

Mechanisms of olfactory imprinting and homing in Pacific

It is well-known that amazing abilities of salmon to return to their natal stream for reproduction, and that the olfactory functions play important roles for imprinting and homing in salmon.

Fish and Olfaction Homing Northwest Fisheries Science Center

Fish and Olfaction Homing Fish have an acute sense of smell and every aspect of their lives is influenced by olfaction (e.g., feeding, reproduction, migration, and predator avoidance). Using an integrative approach that includes molecular biology, electrophysiology, and field-based behavior, we are studying the critical role of olfaction in the life history and ecology of different fish species.

Geomagnetic imprinting A unifying hypothesis of long

For salmon, the hypothesis is therefore not in conflict with olfactory imprinting or the established role of olfactory cues in guiding fish upriver. The hypothesis proposes instead that a second type of imprinting occurs in tandem with olfactory imprinting and functions in guiding long-distance movements that precede the part of the migration guided by olfactory cues.

Olfactory Imprinting of Amino Acids in Lacustrine Sockeye

Introduction. Adult salmon are well known for their accurate homing, guided by an olfactory memory of their natal stream that is imprinted during their juvenile stage . Two different olfactory hypotheses have been proposed for salmon imprinting and homing: one is the imprinting hypothesis based on coho salmon (Oncorhynchus kisutch) ; the other control mechanisms to imprinting and homing because we lacked molecular markers that would permit the evaluation of olfactory memory formation and retrieval in the salmon brain. The N-methyl-D-aspartate receptor (NMDAR) is a glutamate receptor channel subtype and mediates most of Imprinting in developing systems One of the most spectacular, but neurobiologically little exploited, examples of imprinting during development is homing by salmon [7,8]. After living in the ocean for several years, salmon swim thousands of kilometers back to the stream of their birth to spawn.
